

FOURFOLD OFFERS FOR THE CITY LOAN

Sale of $12,774,200 Issue Depends on Legality of "All or None" Bids

WILL BE AWARDED HERE

Most of the High Proposals, 49 in All, Come From Philadelphians

The question of the legality of an "all or none" proposal will depend on the award of the $12,774,200 issue of city bonds, for which proposals were received by Mayor Smith today.

No matter which way the controversy is decided, the bonds will be sold in Philadelphia, as most of the higher offers come from bankers here.

The protest on the legality was made by Charles L. McFarland, representing the banking syndicate headed by the National City Company and Montgomery Clothier & Tyler, who also submitted proposals for all or all the bonds. The protest was based on the fact that an award was made a month ago to Drexel & Co. on an "all or none" basis.

Mayor Smith said following the opening of the bids that he would not consider the controversy, and would make the awards tomorrow. The loan was oversubscribed fourfold over the $12,774,200 asked.

Drexel & Co. represented a syndicate on the "all or none" bid at $16,691. They made their bid subject to an opinion by John G. Johnson as to the legality of the proposal. The Northern Company submitted three sets of estimates. They offered $12,645 for the $12,774,200 five-year bonds; $12,666 for the $5,369,000 thirty-year bonds and 162,667 for the $2,560,000 fifty-year bonds. A third bid for the entire issue was that of William A. Reid & Co. at 162,137. This was said to be the high mark for two of the three classes of bonds.

FOORTY-NINEBIDERS ON LOAN. The popularity of the issue was evidenced by the numerous bidders. Forty-nine offers were made for either part or all of the bonds. Mrs. Amelia du Pont of Wilmington was one of the bidders, she offering to take $25,000 of the bonds at par. Among the other individuals and institutions of this city entering bids were:

Philadelphia Savings Fund Society, $500,000 of the thirty-year bonds at 162,875.

Townsend, Whelen & Co., various amounts of five-year bonds at prices ranging from 100 to 105.

Pennsylvania Bank and Trust Company, small lots of five-year bonds at 160,165 and fifty-year bonds at 162,625.

City Sinking Fund Commission, $150,000 of the thirty-year bonds at 162,55.

Northern Trust Company, $500,000 of the forty-year bonds at par.

Wells Fargo & Company, $250,000 of the thirty-year bonds at 162,625.

Franklin Trust Company, $100,000 of the fifty-year bonds at par.

William Solomon, of New York, all of five-year bonds at 161,675.

Mellon National Bank, of Pittsburgh, all of five-year bonds at 161,475.

LAST LOAN OVERSUBSCRIBED.

The last bond sale was for $10,000,000. It was held on October 31, 1916, and the entire allotment went to a syndicate of bankers headed by Drexel & Co. at 162,191. This sale was oversubscribed four times, and New York firms offered prizes for various amounts at figures ranging up to 162,250. The sale in June, 1916, was for $5,000,000, and the most of the bonds went to Drexel & Co., at 160,121. The last bond sale under the Blithenburgh administration was on December 31, 1915, when Reilly Brock & Co. bought the largest part of the issue at 162,2573.

Injured Man Dreamed of Attack.

William Gilman, fifty-one years old, 1212 Palmer street, was found unconscious in his bed today with twenty small cuts in his throat. He had been ill for several days after being removed to St. Mary's Hospital and told physicians he dreamed last night that a negro was chasing him with a razor. He said he could not account for the cuts in his throat. Gilman will recover.

Marriage Licenses at Elizton.

ELIZTON, Md., Jan. 8.—The following marriage licenses were issued at the County Court Office in Elizton today: Albert A. Tamm and Elizabeth M. Ruth; Charles P. Lagrone and Angelina Cini; Giacomo Leonetti and Angelina Rovito; Michael Verma and Mary Rovito; James T. Dolan and Anna E. Roth; Nelson Powell and Anna Townsend; Morris Pruzansky and Phyllis L. Pruzansky and Emma M. Martin; Harry Villerman and Marie Anglade; William E. McCall and Henriette Sheppard and Leon E. McCall; and Joseph E. Quion, all of Philadelphia; Peter J. Hanley and Eddie Kilp, Melbourne, Australia; George W. H. and Vida Morgan, Cedar Hill, Md.; Enoch Folekski and Mary Curran, Shamokin and John N. Kirby, Medford, N. J., and Ethel R. Winters, Philadelphia.

TODAY'S MARRIAGE LICENSES.

Joseph H. McGinnis, Allentown, Pa., and Louise Ardisse, 628 Oliver st.; John and Rose V. Chacko, 273A N. 29th st.; and William H. Deane, 515 S. 21st st., and Margaret Joseph T. Whiting, 2605 N. 21st st., and Anna Howard McNeely, 140th st., and Helen Vitzman, 3492 Keim st.; and Mary Natale, 1236 Erie ave.; and Arthur L. Kestrel, Shaxon Hill, Pa., and Jessie A. Falanga, 624 Flawater st., and Frank E. Hart, 201 New Market st.; and Anna Powell, 202 Waverly st., and Gertrude Henry J. Hauser, 1313 N. 25th st., and William George Sweeney, 2206 Summer st.; and Julia Robinson, 1511 Fairmount ave., and Joseph L. Flanagan, 1600 S. 19th st., and Elizabeth Bond, 1537 Beechwood st., and Eddie Reuben E. Karpstein, 505 Main st., Pa., and Nathaniel D. Bond, 141 Carson st.; and Helen Rothbaum, 963 N. Broadmead ave., and Louis Kado, Chester, Pa., and Susanna Deneck, 2522 Ashton st.

Hanscom's

prices always the lowest for fine groceries, delicatessen, pastry, candy, etc.

Send for our weekly list of special prices.

1232 Market St. and Branches

BRADBURN & NIGRO

CORRECT MEN'S TAILORS

Cor. 13th and Sansom

OUR SEMI-ANNUAL SALE

THE BIGGEST TAILORING EVER OFFERED. Just to make new tailors and改订 old ones during Jan.

Feb. and March. Your suits, coats, jackets, etc., can be set in, re-made, and re-tailored for $35.

Overcoats and hats $25.

Overcoats and hats $25.

"SAFETY PATROL" VOW TAKEN BY SCHOOLBOYS

Young Knights Invested With Insignia of New Order at E. M. Stanton School

TO PROTECT MATES

Will Guard Companions From Motor-car and Other Dangers at Assembly and Dismissal

I promise on my word of honor to faithfully inform you of my life and that of every pupil in my school. I will be courageous in carrying out the duties of my office.

I sounded like a chivalrous knight of old, and it might have been in spirit, but in the rosy-cheeked, 5 feet 1 inch fellow it was one Watson Mill, junior pupil of the E. M. Stanton School and the first safety patrol member to do active service in the safety patrol system, an organization formed among the boys of the school and today put into effect at the E. M. Stanton, Seventeenth and Christian streets.

A moment later twelve little lads were repeating the same solemn promise that is the first step toward the insurance of the safety of the school children of Philadelphia. Ten minutes later, solemnly invested in all the ritual of masonic service and dressed in the insignia of the safety patrol, the little knights of the sidewalk marched valiantly out to their post. At their head was Miss Beatrice V. Clinch, "safety-first lady" of the P. R. T. and the bringer-in of the safety-scout system in Philadelphia.

Watson Mill, ordered the young lady who is honorary captain of the boys, and to a man, twelve pledged right now, the less earnest, for a bit of boyish grome, shot up to "washed for the occasion" faces and affirmed they would keep faith.

The silent poker was turned over to the twelve-year-old captain who lost no time in taking advantage of his new power. "Attention," he said, "we're bound, and blot his name from the schoolboy on the sidewalk to take their assigned places for the protection of their schoolmates."

Guarding of the street at dismissal and assembly of sessions is not the only duty of the patrol boys. They have also pledged themselves to the prevention of amateurish instances of loss of life and property, such as "fitching" (on trolley cars) and automobiles and roller skating in the street. They have promised to keep down street embankments.

At this juncture in the first day's service occurred an incident which comes within the latter class. Watson Mill, so promptly proved that the patrol patrol is decidedly useful, was pulled over to the side of the road by a two-year-old captain who lost no time in convincing the little girls in his vicinity were distinctly out of order.

The safety patrol in Philadelphia is a result of much aspiration and planning on the part of Miss Clinch. This first organization at the E. M. Stanton School is not in the nature of a scouting establishment. Establishment of similar corps will speedily follow. Within this week safety patrols will be in active service at the Jefferson and Washington Schools.

The boys are enthusiastic students to live up to the new duties which have been imposed upon them. Energy that has been formerly employed in free-for-all fights, window breaking, etc., will now be saved and expended in this new occupation of playing knight errant to school comrades. The little boys at the E. M. Stanton school were fortunate enough to be the pioneer unit in this field. Ralph G. Stiles, John Stanis, John Cains, Frank O'Aurora, Carl Spiegel, Antonio Di Sant, Bernard Atlas, Watson Mill, Oscar Brown, James O'Rourke, Alvin and Harry Springer.

As a political document it did not have a single constructive sentence, no principle to guide the thoughts of men, nothing to give birth to a new idea or theory. If I were going to offer a few political maxims such as our brothers here in Philadelphia have sent, I would try to make it constructive."

The document attached by the Rev. Mr. MacFarland was drafted ten days ago in the office of the Board of Education, signed by the Rev. Charles L. McFarland, general secretary of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, in an address yesterday at the Central Young Men's Christian Association. The proclamation of the churchmen was decried as "unresting, unthought-out and not enough Christian."

"There has gone out from Philadelphia," said the Rev. MacFarland, one of those intercessors from men representing Christian forces, an utterance to the world, prepared by George Wharton Pepper, and signed by others.

As I analyzed it, I was impressed with two things. The first was that it was not a thoroughly Christian utterance. I will not dispute the statement of fact, but it was without that Christian spirit that should characterize every Christian utterance. It breathed the spirit of justice, but it had none of the spirit of love which only can conquer.

"As a political document it did not have a single constructive sentence, no principle to guide the thoughts of men, nothing to give birth to a new idea or theory. If I were going to offer a few political maxims such as our brothers here in Philadelphia have sent, I would try to make it constructive."

The document attached by the Rev. Mr. MacFarland was drafted ten days ago in the office of the Board of Education, signed by the Rev. Charles L. McFarland, general secretary of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, in an address yesterday at the Central Young Men's Christian Association. The proclamation of the churchmen was decried as "unresting, unthought-out and not enough Christian."

"There has gone out from Philadelphia," said the Rev. MacFarland, one of those intercessors from men representing Christian forces, an utterance to the world, prepared by George Wharton Pepper, and signed by others.

As I analyzed it, I was impressed with two things. The first was that it was not a thoroughly Christian utterance. I will not dispute the statement of fact, but it was without that Christian spirit that should characterize every Christian utterance. It breathed the spirit of justice, but it had none of the spirit of love which only can conquer.

"As a political document it did not have a single constructive sentence, no principle to guide the thoughts of men, nothing to give birth to a new idea or theory. If I were going to offer a few political maxims such as our brothers here in Philadelphia have sent, I would try to make it constructive."

The document attached by the Rev. Mr. MacFarland was drafted ten days ago in the office of the Board of Education, signed by the Rev. Charles L. McFarland, general secretary of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, in an address yesterday at the Central Young Men's Christian Association. The proclamation of the churchmen was decried as "unresting, unthought-out and not enough Christian."

"There has gone out from Philadelphia," said the Rev. MacFarland, one of those intercessors from men representing Christian forces, an utterance to the world, prepared by George Wharton Pepper, and signed by others.

As I analyzed it, I was impressed with two things. The first was that it was not a thoroughly Christian utterance. I will not dispute the statement of fact, but it was without that Christian spirit that should characterize every Christian utterance. It breathed the spirit of justice, but it had none of the spirit of love which only can conquer.

"As a political document it did not have a single constructive sentence, no principle to guide the thoughts of men, nothing to give birth to a new idea or theory. If I were going to offer a few political maxims such as our brothers here in Philadelphia have sent, I would try to make it constructive."

The document attached by the Rev. Mr. MacFarland was drafted ten days ago in the office of the Board of Education, signed by the Rev. Charles L. McFarland, general secretary of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, in an address yesterday at the Central Young Men's Christian Association. The proclamation of the churchmen was decried as "unresting, unthought-out and not enough Christian."

"There has gone out from Philadelphia," said the Rev. MacFarland, one of those intercessors from men representing Christian forces, an utterance to the world, prepared by George Wharton Pepper, and signed by others.

As I analyzed it, I was impressed with two things. The first was that it was not a thoroughly Christian utterance. I will not dispute the statement of fact, but it was without that Christian spirit that should characterize every Christian utterance. It breathed the spirit of justice, but it had none of the spirit of love which only can conquer.

"As a political document it did not have a single constructive sentence, no principle to guide the thoughts of men, nothing to give birth to a new idea or theory. If I were going to offer a few political maxims such as our brothers here in Philadelphia have sent, I would try to make it constructive."

The document attached by the Rev. Mr. MacFarland was drafted ten days ago in the office of the Board of Education, signed by the Rev. Charles L. McFarland, general secretary of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, in an address yesterday at the Central Young Men's Christian Association. The proclamation of the churchmen was decried as "unresting, unthought-out and not enough Christian."

"There has gone out from Philadelphia," said the Rev. MacFarland, one of those intercessors from men representing Christian forces, an utterance to the world, prepared by George Wharton Pepper, and signed by others.

As I analyzed it, I was impressed with two things. The first was that it was not a thoroughly Christian utterance. I will not dispute the statement of fact, but it was without that Christian spirit that should characterize every Christian utterance. It breathed the spirit of justice, but it had none of the spirit of love which only can conquer.

"As a political document it did not have a single constructive sentence, no principle to guide the thoughts of men, nothing to give birth to a new idea or theory. If I were going to offer a few political maxims such as our brothers here in Philadelphia have sent, I would try to make it constructive."

The document attached by the Rev. Mr. MacFarland was drafted ten days ago in the office of the Board of Education, signed by the Rev. Charles L. McFarland, general secretary of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, in an address yesterday at the Central Young Men's Christian Association. The proclamation of the churchmen was decried as "unresting, unthought-out and not enough Christian."

"There has gone out from Philadelphia," said the Rev. MacFarland, one of those intercessors from men representing Christian forces, an utterance to the world, prepared by George Wharton Pepper, and signed by others.

As I analyzed it, I was impressed with two things. The first was that it was not a thoroughly Christian utterance. I will not dispute the statement of fact, but it was without that Christian spirit that should characterize every Christian utterance. It breathed the spirit of justice, but it had none of the spirit of love which only can conquer.

"As a political document it did not have a single constructive sentence, no principle to guide the thoughts of men, nothing to give birth to a new idea or theory. If I were going to offer a few political maxims such as our brothers here in Philadelphia have sent, I would try to make it constructive."

The document attached by the Rev. Mr. MacFarland was drafted ten days ago in the office of the Board of Education, signed by the Rev. Charles L. McFarland, general secretary of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, in an address yesterday at the Central Young Men's Christian Association. The proclamation of the churchmen was decried as "unresting, unthought-out and not enough Christian."

"There has gone out from Philadelphia," said the Rev. MacFarland, one of those intercessors from men representing Christian forces, an utterance to the world, prepared by George Wharton Pepper, and signed by others.

As I analyzed it, I was impressed with two things. The first was that it was not a thoroughly Christian utterance. I will not dispute the statement of fact, but it was without that Christian spirit that should characterize every Christian utterance. It breathed the spirit of justice, but it had none of the spirit of love which only can conquer.

"As a political document it did not have a single constructive sentence, no principle to guide the thoughts of men, nothing to give birth to a new idea or theory. If I were going to offer a few political maxims such as our brothers here in Philadelphia have sent, I would try to make it constructive."

The document attached by the Rev. Mr. MacFarland was drafted ten days ago in the office of the Board of Education, signed by the Rev. Charles L. McFarland, general secretary of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, in an address yesterday at the Central Young Men's Christian Association. The proclamation of the churchmen was decried as "unresting, unthought-out and not enough Christian."

"There has gone out from Philadelphia," said the Rev. MacFarland, one of those intercessors from men representing Christian forces, an utterance to the world, prepared by George Wharton Pepper, and signed by others.

As I analyzed it, I was impressed with two things. The first was that it was not a thoroughly Christian utterance. I will not dispute the statement of fact, but it was without that Christian spirit that should characterize every Christian utterance. It breathed the spirit of justice, but it had none of the spirit of love which only can conquer.

"As a political document it did not have a single constructive sentence, no principle to guide the thoughts of men, nothing to give birth to a new idea or theory. If I were going to offer a few political maxims such as our brothers here in Philadelphia have sent, I would try to make it constructive."

The document attached by the Rev. Mr. MacFarland was drafted ten days ago in the office of the Board of Education, signed by the Rev. Charles L. McFarland, general secretary of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, in an address yesterday at the Central Young Men's Christian Association. The proclamation of the churchmen was decried as "unresting, unthought-out and not